Friday evening | August 2

7:30 Research and Foundations of Anthroposophic Medicine | Dr. Ross Rentea
Unexpected and beautiful archetypes reveal themselves if the rhythms in the substance world are carefully followed, allowing an ever more effective anthroposophic medicine to emerge.

Saturday | August 3

9:00 Archetypes of Women's Health and Illness | Dr. Andrea Rentea
Archetypal pictures from the world of plants can help us better understand women's concerns. New and practical solutions that encompass both the spiritual and physical female constitution can thus be developed.

10:15 Eurythmy

11:00 Anthroposophy and the Diseases of our Time | Dr. Basil Williams and Dr. Joseph Cooney
Anthroposophy brings deep insights to the understanding of specific diseases of our time, such as autism, dementia, heart disease, asthma, cancer, and allergies.

12:00 Lunch

2:00 The New Pediatrics – Healing and Helping Children | Dr. Mark Kamsler
In order to master the diseases that have reached epidemic proportions among our children today, their spiritual archetypes need to be understood. These archetypes are the basis of a variety of newly developed remedies that can support the incarnating issues of children in our time.

3:30 Anthroposophic medicine: Past, Present, and Future | Dr. Ana Lups
How the anthroposophic principles of healing lead from the past to the anthroposophic medicine of the future.

4:30 Discussion

5:00 Eurythmy

5:30 Dinner Break

7:15 The Esoteric Basis of Anthroposophic Medicine | Dr. Ross Rentea
The work of Rudolf Steiner with Ita Wegman and Marie Steiner has an archetypal quality leading from the ancient Mystery Temple to the future that helps us understand how the "Laboratory Table" can become an "Altar Table."

8:30-9:00 Ending Discussion

Sunday morning | August 4

9:00 Practical Results of Anthroposophic Medicines | Dr. Ross Rentea
From pedagogy to medicine Rudolf Steiner's presentation of the four archetypal temperaments and their related organs can bring us to new healing pathways in mastering problems of the heart, kidney, liver, and lungs.

10:15 Eurythmy

11:00-12:00 Closing Panel

Ross Rentea, MD, a board certified anthroposophic physician for over 30 years, is a board member of the American College of Anthroposophic Medicine, has lectured internationally, written articles, and holds a medical device patent. He is a co-founder of True Botanica Company and True Botanica Foundation.

Basil Williams, MD, has practiced medicine for 39 years. In his field of Internal Medicine and Infectious Diseases, he has had a hospital practice and was Professor of Medicine at Midwestern University. He studied Anthroposophic Medicine in Europe and has practiced Anthroposophic Medicine from 1980 until retiring in 2002.

Andrea Rentea, MD, a board certified anthroposophic physician for over 30 years, is a board member of the American College of Anthroposophic Medicine, a medical consultant in Waldorf Schools, and a co-founder of True Botanica Company and True Botanica Foundation.

Ana Lups, MD, an internist and cardiologist originally from Holland, is widely known for her diagnostic skills. Her anthroposophically based medical practice at Pleroma Farms offers a wide range of therapies, including remedies, therapeutic baths, therapeutic eurythmy, massage, Chirophonetics, visual arts therapy, light therapy, and counseling.

Mark Kamsler, MD, is board certified in both pediatrics and anthroposophic medicine. He has a medical practice near Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and is a board member of the American College of Anthroposophic Medicine and a co-founder of True Botanica and True Botanica Foundation.

Joseph Cooney, MD, has been in private practice in Stockbridge, MA, for ten years. He graduated from Georgetown Medical School and trained in Family Medicine. He is presently training in Anthroposophic Medicine through the Physicians Association of Anthroposophic Medicine and is school physician for the Great Barrington Rudolf Steiner School.

Illness is rational, purposeful, meaningful, and treatable. According to Rudolf Steiner the study of disease becomes a continuation of the study of nature: "Spiritual insight into both health and illness enriches our entire view of nature." It reminds us that as humans we are embedded in a world of natural processes and dynamic interactions that span the micro levels of cells and the macro level of galaxies. We are not estranged from the environment, we are the environment in human form. Illness is not an irrelevancy in our lives; it is a clue to the core of our life. Consciousness is not divorced from the body; it is its life blood and essence.
