

A Study of Potentized Blood

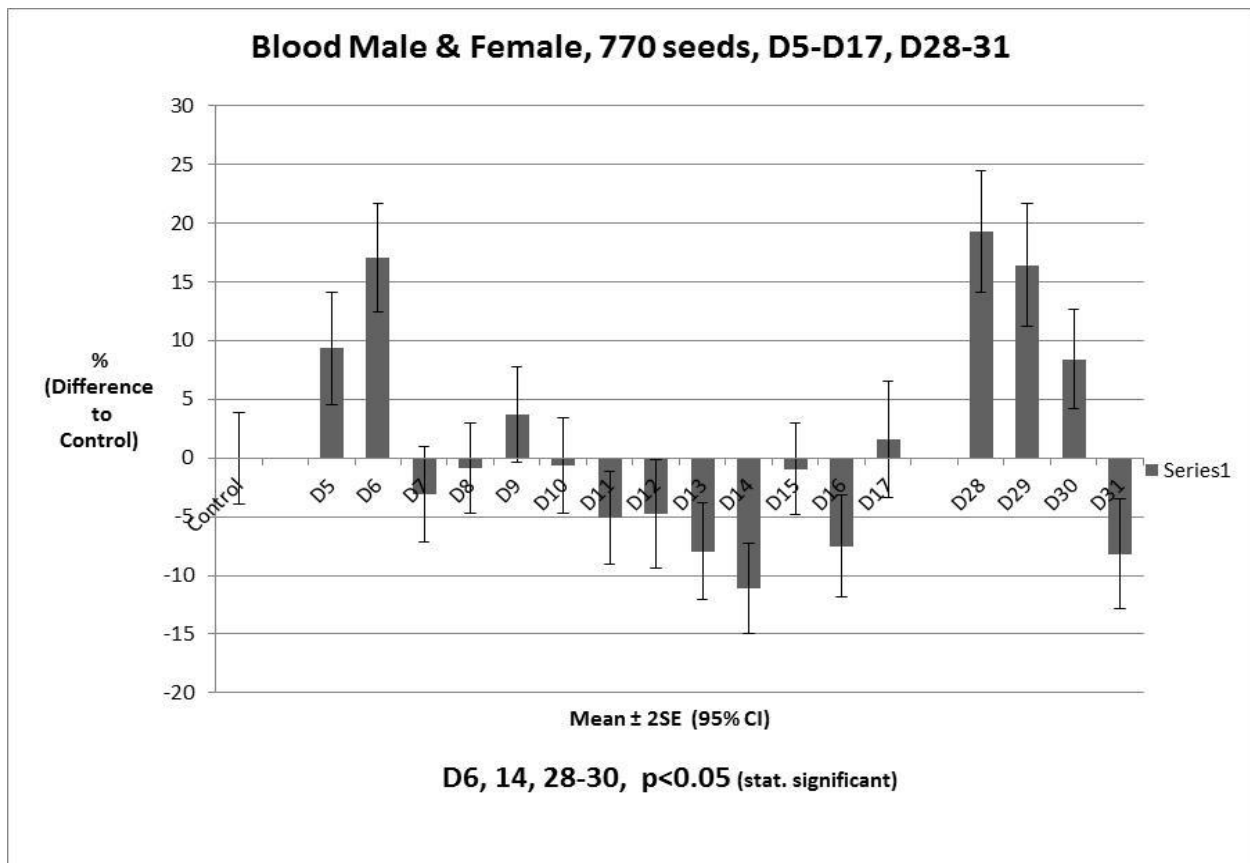

Anthroposophical doctors have used the so called “autologous blood” injections (meaning an injection containing blood from the patient’s own body) for many decades. This therapy has proved particularly useful in viral infections.

More recently therapy with a potentized form of the patient’s own blood has emerged as effective particularly in children’s illnesses. More advances are sure to come.

We have let seeds grow under the influence of blood potencies. Over 21,000 measurements were necessary in order to obtain the curve below.

As one can see certain potencies are very “vitalizing” to the etheric forces, others are very inhibiting. The results are statistically very significant.

These results can help the physicians determine which potencies are best suited for their therapeutic purpose.

This is a preview! A complete report will be given later. We hope nevertheless that it gave a feel for our work.
